The heads are very delicate, the expression of the Madonna most serious; the draping is very sharply outlined, and of unusually soft tints. The hands of the Child, the hair, the architecture and stone figures, Adam and Eve and the Lord are all executed with the greatest delicacy. Hans Memling (1430--1494) was a pupil of Rogier van der Weyden s No. 635, again -Madonna and Child- to whom an angel hands an apple; at the left the donor of the picture (Illust. 38). The mother virginally austere and of queenly splendour, the fertile land scape, the surrounding six stone-coloured angels and two scenes of martyrdom are all given with the utmost fineness. Peeter Brueghel the older, called the peasant Brueghel (1525--1569) is particularly well represented in this gallery. Let us choose No. 717, -The Rural Wedding- (Illust. 49). Splendid rendering of how the viands are carried in on the unhung door, how the young couple and their kith and kin are waiting in happy expectation of the feast. No. 719, -The Church Fair- (Illust. 5), is a second excellent work by this artist. This particularly graphic, powerful figure painting is beautifully preserved and shows the fine gray tone peculiar to this artist. Select creations by Peter Paul Rubens (1577--1640) here demand our attention. We cau only mention a few of the chief works. No. 829, -Helene Fourment-, the artist s second wife (Illust 12). This pictnre is remembered in Rubens will with...
